Lydia has been a member of the professional business and education communities for over 30 years. Her career has included teaching in community colleges, developing and presenting adult continuing education programs, serving as an educational administrator, assisting college/community with career and job search coaching, and enabling business connections as a chamber of commerce executive. Service and education have been her keys to success in providing information and training for colleagues, employees, volunteers, and specialized audiences.

Presentation and training styles include lively, interactive sessions for small and large groups in both meeting and training settings. As appropriate, music may be the anchor of a presentation and may include using her expertise at the piano.
